

THE ARMSTRONG-ISAACS BURSARY

The Armstrong-Isaacs Trust is based on a major donation from David Armstrong, who was a founder member of the original ULAA in 1947, a lifelong member of the LAA's predecessor the PFA and its chairman from 1960 to 1964. His legacy, co-named with aircraft designer and builder John O. Isaacs, has since 1998 aided young flyers in gaining their licenses. This year three Bursaries are being offered to support young pilots already in training, offering additional funding to allow them to complete their courses, at a time when so often money starts to run out.

The three Armstrong-Isaacs Bursaries are open to any pilot in UK PPL training under the age of 30. They will contribute up to £1,500 per person to assist in their completion of their course. The funds required will be agreed with the Trust, then lodged with the flying school of your choice and must be used exclusively for flying training or flight examinations. (It cannot be used for example for travel, accommodation or subsistence). To qualify for these bursaries you are required to already have reached 'first solo' standard, have completed a minimum of five hours solo training and have gained the necessary medical and ground qualifications to continue your training.

HOW TO APPLY

All applications must be completed on the second page of this form. If you wish to apply, please download it onto your hard drive and type your answers into the text fields using Adobe Reader. (Note the character limit for each question!). Save and email the completed application form as an attachment to office@laa.uk.com, with the title "Armstrong-Isaacs Bursary" in the subject line. It should arrive on or before the closing date of Monday 27th November 2017. The selectors may contact you with further questions, and may request an interview (which could be by telephone) if necessary.

The award will include aircraft hire and instructors costs only, it does not for example include any travel, accommodation or subsistence. The award will be paid to a suitable flying school agreed between the selection panel and the successful applicant. The successful recipients will be announced during January 2018.

We look forward to receiving your application.
